4.2.1 Library is automated using integrated library management system
ILMS.

Information of ILMS software: LIB-MAN Cloud-based Management system.

Nature of automation: Partial

Version of software: 2.1.0.

Acquisition: Books are purchased as per demands of teachers and students and recorded in e-granthlaya software. 199500 e-books and 6000 + e-jouranals available in N-list. For Divyang students braille books are available. Serial control: Journals entries are available in detail. Login ID is issued to students by registering serially according to programmes. After registration, names of students are enrolled in software. Control key is maintained by librarian. Library installed CCTV to monitor and control the processing. Circulation: Information of borrowers is designed to make it simple for students and staff to circulate books. Newspaper: This module details on entering newspapers, frequency, transaction, payment receipt and selling of newspapers. OPAC: Library has an OPAC system in place. Students and teachers search registered books by author, title, publisher, etc. In E-library, 4 Computers with LAN, Wi-Fi, and networking facilities are available. Besides, there are 25 CDs available in library. Institution is attempting to create digital library through these modules. N- list and NDL are accessible.

e-Granthalaya - A Digital Agenda for Library Automation & Networking

Libraries are the social institutions as they provide various kinds of services to the users and citizen of the city / country. They have been the essential part of the education system in the society since early days. In the modern India, libraries have become the integral part of not only educational institutions but also other government setup like ministries, departments, district centres, etc. Keeping in view the large number of Public and Government libraries in India and also the high cost of commercial software, it becomes imperative to provide zero-cost software along with free support, training and services.

M. Moni
Deputy Director General
moni@nic.in

Ram Kumar Matoria
Technical Director
rkmatoria@nic.in

NIC has been a pioneer source to design, develop and support ICT tools and services for the Indian Libraries since its existence as the latter are integral part / divisions of the ministries, departments and other Government organizations. From 1994 to 2000, NIC distributed the Techlib Plus / Bassis Plus software to Indian libraries. During 2002 it was found that NIC had developed over 30 different library automation software for various ministries and Government departments. All such software were designed by various NIC groups for their respective ministries without following the standards, rules and practices prevalent in Indian libraries.

Later it was decided by the Committee constituted under the chairmanship of Sh. M Moni, DDG(NIC) to use e-Granthalaya Software among the many from NIC and to further develop and promote by the NIC.

e-Granthalaya

e-Granthalaya is a Library Management Software facilitates to automate not only the in-house activities of the library but also the user services. The first version of the Software was developed by the Karnataka State center of NIC, Bangalore. Later, the development was taken over by the Library and Information Services Division at NICHQs, New Delhi. The following table shows the release of various versions of the software

Ver.	Year	Technology/Platform	DBMS
1.0	2003	VB6/ASP	SQL Server 2007
2.0	2005	VB6/ASP	SQL Server 2000
3.0	2007	VB.NET/ASP.NET 2.0	SQL Server 2005
*4.0	2010	ASP.NET 3.5 with Silverlight2	SQL Server 2008

*future version

Release of e-Granthalaya Software

Why e-Granthalaya Free

There is no such a designated agency in India, either Governmental, Professional or Private, which can provide a free software and services to these libraries. Central Governments as well as State Governments seem no serious for Indian Libraries development. Similarly, professional bodies in LIS always engaged in over-glorifying the profession and not provided the solution / tools even after 35 years of Post -Ranganathan era. Also, there are many Library Networks (DELNET, ADINET, CALIBNET, PUNENET, MYLIBNET, INFLIBNET, etc) in existence; however, very few provide the library services in a network environment. The simple reason is that these networks have not developed any tool/software to automate the Indian libraries and provide the services to them; they are financially poor and thus can not purchase commercial tools also. So, at NIC it had been decided to develop a good library automation software and to provide the same at zero cost to the Indian libraries. Moreover, we data, even across the participating libraries in a common database.

Besides, as there are many international standards prevalent in the field, so it has been decided to make use of such standards like AACR2, MARC21, UNICODE, etc. The software does not impose any catalog standard, although, the data entry of the catalog records are inclined towards the AACR2, an international standard for Cataloging. While designing the software, it has also been kept in view the fields/data elements suggested by the AACR2/MARC standards are included in the internal structure of the database to make it compliant with MARC 21 while making output (Export) and import options.

Keeping in view the common search of the library catalogs within the cluster of libraries as well as across the cluster, it has been decided to make use of the current technology from Microsoft i.e. SRW (Search and Retrieve Web service) which aims to integrate access to various networked resources, and to promote interoperability between distributed databases, by providing a common utilization framework. SRW is a web-service-based protocol which is regarded as the big brother of implementation of the Z39.50 Information Retrieval protocol with recent developments in the web technologies arena. SRW features both SOAP and URL-based access mechanisms (SRU) to provide for a wide variety of possible clients ranging from Microsoft's .Net initiative to simple Javascript and XSLT transformations. It leverages the CQL query language which provides a powerful yet intuitive means to formulate searches.

The protocol mandates the use of open and industry-supported standards XML and XML Schema, and where appropriate, XPath and SOAP. SRW has been developed by an international team, minimizing cross-language pitfalls and other potential internationalization problems

16. Distribution Policy

As mentioned elsewhere in this document, the e-Granthalaya and its companion software i.e. NewsNIC are being distributed at zero cost to the libraries. Not only the software, but training, support and up-gradation also are being provided free. The support is given for installation and troubleshooting if any. The users of the
